A statement from the Managing Partner

RPC is a global law firm and recognised as leaders in markets ranging from retail to insurance, technology to media. We have a global staff count of over 900 people, comprising 125 partners and over 300 lawyers.

RPC is opposed to all forms of modern slavery and human trafficking. It has a severe impact on the individuals subjected to it and for wider society generally. RPC recognises that this is a global issue and steps should be taken to combat it both at home and abroad.

RPC is committed to adhering to the strictest ethical behaviour and standards in all of our business dealings. We recognise that we have a moral duty to do all we can to act transparently in this area and to try to ensure that there is no modern slavery or human trafficking in our supply chains or in any part of our business. We strive to raise awareness of modern slavery issues generally through our various workstreams both internally and externally and aim to conduct all of our business dealings in an ethical manner.

This statement is designed to provide an overview of our business, our supply chains and is intended to detail our policies and procedures used to combat modern slavery and human trafficking.

Our supply chains

The supply chains RPC uses to provide its services primarily relate to:

- professional and business services,
- technology,
- facilities management,
- maintenance and catering.

All RPC suppliers are expected to implement a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery and human trafficking.

In the last 12 months we have had no reported incidents of slavery or trafficking from our staff or suppliers.

Risk assessment

We consider the risk of modern slavery occurring in each of the jurisdictions in which we operate with reference to publicly available sources and our own knowledge.

Given the sectors in which we operate, RPC considers its directly employed staff to be relatively low risk in relation to the potential for modern slavery and human trafficking.

In relation to its supply chain, RPC considers there is a slightly higher risk in relation to the potential for modern slavery and human trafficking. However, it is still considered to be low risk overall.

To address the risks of modern slavery occurring in our supply chain, we aim to ensure that we only work with suppliers who align to our principles of acting with integrity, ethical behaviour and those who have a strong commitment to human rights, as set out below.

Due diligence

RPC considers the risk profile of all new key suppliers to its businesses and looks to either:

- review that supplier's modern slavery statement (where they are required to have one) and / or code of conduct, or
- ask that the supplier sign up to RPC's supplier code of conduct.

We are also continually reviewing our supplier onboarding processes and extending due diligence requirements for higher value contracts and higher risk suppliers which may, where possible, include specific contractual compliance confirmations, including in relation to modern slavery.

In relation to modern slavery and human trafficking, RPC's supplier code of conduct requires that its suppliers:

- act with the highest standards of honesty, professionalism, ethics and integrity
- demonstrate a commitment to equality of opportunity, diversity and inclusion in the way they conduct business and manage their staff
- do not use any form of forced or involuntary labour and comply with the Act
- implement working hours and pay staff wages which are compliant with relevant laws
- provide staff with mechanisms to raise workplace concerns

If a supplier does not meet RPC's standards and requirements, we will consider whether it is appropriate to work with them and, if necessary, either help them remedy any issues or where more appropriate take steps to terminate contracts.

Our policies

In addition to due diligence on suppliers, RPC has a number of policies and procedures which are relevant in relation to modern slavery and human trafficking and these set out our commitment to acting ethically and with integrity in all our business dealings.

These policies include:

- a Modern Slavery Policy
- an Anti-Bribery and Gifts and Hospitality Policy and
- a Whistle-blowing Policy

RPC encourages a “speak up” culture. All staff are encouraged to report any actual or suspected breaches of RPC’s policies and procedures in confidence and where such reports are made these will be investigated by a senior member of the firm with involvement from key stakeholders as required.

Training

All RPC staff have access to an online learning platform which provides information on modern slavery compliance on a periodic basis.

RPC raises awareness of the need for modern slavery compliance in key support teams by discussing the supplier code of conduct and encouraging initiatives designed to ensure that its supply chains are free from modern slavery and human trafficking.

RPC also makes available to its staff a staff assistance programme (including an independent confidential 24/7 helpline), which can be used by its staff for free and confidential advice in relation to workplace concerns or issues.

During FY2022, members of RPC’s Modern Slavery Steering Group (MSSG) completed further online training, which looked specifically at modern slavery issues in the UK. Our MSSG was formally launched in 2021 with a view to raising awareness and increase the profile of modern slavery and human trafficking issues.

Measuring effectiveness

RPC periodically reviews its systems to ensure that it has robust policies and processes in place to mitigate the risk of modern slavery and human trafficking. It reviews its policies and procedures on an ongoing basis and measures effectiveness by looking at the number of reports of modern slavery over the course of a year and listening to feedback from clients, staff and suppliers.

Our own business initiatives and actions taken up to FYE April 2022

The MSSG has continued its focus on internal awareness raising. In March 2022, a talk and chalk session was chaired by our former Director of Risk and Compliance in our Bristol Office to recognise the international day of remembrance of the victims of slavery and the transatlantic slave trade. Members of the MSSG have also arranged a charity Three Peaks challenge to raise money for Unseen (an anti-slavery charity which aims to work towards a world without slavery). This has further contributed to the awareness raising of the issue of modern slavery both within the firm and on our social media platforms.

During FY2022 we started considering modern slavery risks in relation to external contractors who come on site to provide services to RPC including our cleaning supplier and caterers who were asked to complete a modern slavery questionnaire by way of mini audit.

We have also developed our own standard terms and conditions of purchase which include enhanced compliance requirements. We strive to use our own standard terms wherever deemed appropriate and otherwise seek to embed enhanced compliance clauses into our higher risk supplier contracts wherever possible.

Our Asia offices continue to work extensively with Justice Without Borders (JWB) on a pro bono basis. JWB is a Hong Kong registered charity which focuses locally and regionally on cross-border civil litigation for migrant workers who have been victims of labour exploitation or human trafficking. We have worked with JWB to ensure that access to legal assistance continues to be an option for vulnerable migrant workers, even after they return home, advising individual workers on criminal, civil and immigration issues.

Plans for the year to FYE April 2023

RPC considers that its approach to modern slavery and human trafficking issues will evolve on a continuous basis, proportionate to its risks.

We intend to further develop our procurement and audit processes over the coming financial year and we will strive to develop and improve our contractual processes using a risk based approach.

Whilst we consider our directly employed staff to be relatively low risk in relation to the potential for modern slavery and human trafficking, and we take steps to minimise the risk in our supply chain, we are aware that modern slavery remains a pressing issue. It is for this reason, we plan to continue to discuss modern slavery and human trafficking issues with our ESG workstream, look at relevant pro-bono opportunities and will continue to work with JWB in Asia, helping to provide justice for migrant domestic workers and to support JWB as an organisation.
